Q4 Highlights

The gradient above is clipped to the exact shape of the glyphs themselves (`background-clip: text`) instead of painting across the whole heading's box - the standard technique for gradient-filled headings, paired here with `color: transparent` so only the background shows through the letterforms. The third heading's gradient starts from a translucent stop, so it fades in from the left (it follows transparent text, which once made a translucent gradient like this vanish).

Unlike PeachPDF's SVG gradient-text support, this paragraph and the headings above it all stay ordinary, selectable, extractable PDF text - try selecting this text in a PDF viewer. Only the background paint is clipped to glyph shape; the text itself is never converted to vector art.
